...Seamus Heaney's White In 1997, at the age of 50, Seamus Heaney wrote "In the presence of white". It was a revised version of a poem he had written two decades earlier, and it struck a chord with many Irish people. The poem was widely regarded as a landmark piece of work and it won the prestigious T.S. Eliot Prize for Poetry. The words to this poem which have stayed with many people for many years are "...the open road. In the blue infinity of the sky". From the window of his car he saw that the view was totally different to that he had seen before; the landscape was different, the colours were different, and this was when he wrote the words to the poem "The world is still much the same, and yet not the same", which was published in 2004, and which included the lines: "...the open road. In the blue infinity of the sky" The new poem which he wrote for his new audience was called "In the presence of white". Heaney had lived on this farmhouse in County Down for most of his life and when he returned to it in 1997, he was amazed to find a new white door with a white handle and white paint on the wall which surrounded the
