Browse other questions tagged android or ask your own question. Little Nightmares PC game download.Q: How to know if user already viewed a movie? I'm trying to build a movie ticket counter in Laravel. There is a page to enter a movie ticket number. After filling the page, a confirmation pop-up appears that says "Your request is submitted successfully" and then takes to the next page to add another movie ticket. However, what I want to do is to check if the user already viewed the movie that he/she is trying to view the next time before taking to the next page. How can I achieve this? I tried using `get().$movie->where()` but it doesn't work as expected. I'm not sure if I'm using it correctly. Any suggestions or workaround would be great! A: If I understand your question correctly, you will want to ensure that the current user only sees one or the other of the two pages? If so, you will want to pass in the `user_id` in the URL. So, for example, the first page of the app has a URL like this: When a user clicks the 'Add Another' button, the URL would look like this (in plain English): The reason is because we can keep track of what movie a user has seen (e.g. the user has already seen a movie
