To determine the AFG1 and AFG2 level in several species of wild edible plants in Guangdong. The AFG1 and AFG2 level in fresh leaf samples of various wild edible plants were determined by ELISA. The results of samples in 2004 were compared with those in 2003. The samples that showed positive result with ELISA were subjected to HPLC to determine the AFG2 level. The dried samples were used for detection in 2004 and 2005. The dried samples that showed positive result in ELISA were identified by

HPLC. Among 62 samples, 61 samples (98.39%) were positive with ELISA. Only 3 were positive with HPLC. The AFG1 level in fresh leaf samples varied with the types of plants. There was a significant difference (P
